32 Members share their favorite Dream 22 vacation memories
Dear Club Member

I hope you are enjoying a summer full of travel with Hilton Grand Vacations Club! What better way to use your membership than spending quality time with friends and family, either in a new destination or your favorite resort?

In addition, finding your perfect vacation just got that much easier with the arrival of our new booking engine and improvements to our Member dashboard on the Club website. While we hope you have already started using these new features, you can find out more about these updates and what we have planned for the future in the feature on page 26.

Since the last issue, we’ve hosted our second Member Education Event of 2017, this time in San Diego, California. The June event celebrated dads with a special Father’s Day theme, complete with giveaways tailored to fathers. We continue to grow and evolve this program and have more events planned in the future. Be sure to keep an eye out for the fall Club Traveler magazine, which will include a special Member education feature.

As an example of Owner feedback driving change, the association and ownership at Hilton Grand Vacations Club at the Flamingo recently decided to convert all of the property’s rooms to nonsmoking. The Flamingo was the last HGV resort with smoking rooms, so this change now means that 100% of HGV inventory is nonsmoking.

In honor of HGV’s 25th anniversary, we plan to launch a series of initiatives later this year to thank you for your loyalty—stay tuned for more details on how you can join us in celebrating this milestone. We will also continue reaching out for your feedback through a number of topic-specific surveys. As we continue finding ways to listen to you and make improvements to your Club, I can’t thank you enough for sharing your honest opinions with us. We strive to improve your experience each and every day and couldn’t do it without your input.

Happy travels,

Stan Soroka
Chief Customer Officer

Dream Vacation

Club Members Rupert and Amelita Mayuga, Owners at Hilton Grand Vacations Club at the Flamingo in Las Vegas since 2001, dream of a Hawaiian getaway with their kids and grandkids. First stop: under the sea. “We’d love to take them snorkeling at Hanauma Bay, and then we’d visit the Polynesian village at the cultural center. Being Chicago natives, the tropical weather and the way it prompts locals and tourists alike to dress in casual, colorful attire is a draw in and of itself.” And for dinner? “Maui Zaui pizza!”—a favorite at the pizza joint at Hilton Hawaiian Village. The family isn’t a complete stranger to the Aloha State. The Mayugas visited as Hilton Grand Vacations guests before they were Members—and before there were grandchildren in the picture—and it was that vacation that enticed them to join the Club.

Where to Stay: Luxuriate at The Grand Islander by Hilton Grand Vacations Club, within the Hilton Hawaiian Village. With access to a saltwater lagoon as well as the world-famous Waikiki Beach, the Grand Islander hosts children’s recreational activities and is just 20 minutes from Honolulu airport.

Los Cabos Billfish Tournament, Los Cabos, Mexico, October 15–19

Known for drawing spring-breakers and summer beach heads, Cabo has a secret: It’s a haven for fishing types in the fall. Compete in one of the best billfish tournaments in the world over three intense days on the water while enjoying all Cabo has to offer—hip bars, trendy restaurants, stunning nature—sans the crowds. If you don’t want to go it alone, grab a friend and join a team competition for guaranteed memories and possibly an even bigger prize. If that’s not enough for you, never fear: Bisbee’s Black and Blue Marlin Tournament, October 24–28, is just a few days later. loscabostournaments.com

South Carolina Square & Round Dance Convention, Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, January 2018

Put on your dancing shoes for this 43rd annual marathon of stepping, swinging and do-si-do-ing. For those with two left feet, square dancing is easy to pick up, and the convention hosts anxiety-free classes for beginners and kids. Bring the family for days of wholesome fun, including singing calls, line dancing, fashion shows, hot hash and hex dancing. When the dance shoes come off, take in the wining and dining of Myrtle Beach. scsquaredance.com/stateconven.html

Spring Grūv, Park City, Utah, April 2018

Feel the vibes and get silly at this zany 16-day marathon of live music in Park City’s two villages. Eleven years strong, the free outdoor concert series is full of music, events and competitions. Don’t miss the Grūv’s crowning glory—the annual pond skimming competition, in which contestants, in costumes, attempt to make their way across a 100-foot man-made pond by board or ski. Suffice it to say, it makes for some of the most hilarious wipeouts you’ll ever see. parkcitymountain.com

World Series of Poker, Las Vegas, July 2018

Make a pilgrimage to the world’s spiritual home of poker during the game’s biggest and best-known event. Share in the exhilaration of seeing someone win a fortune in the blink of an eye. There are variations to suit all levels of risk, whether you’d like to watch high-rolling women compete in the $10,000 Ladies No-Limit Hold’em Championship, or the less bold in the $888 Crazy Eights No-Limit Hold’em 8-Handed. As always, the Strip will have the luxurious, tasty distractions and indulgences that the city is famous for. But don’t miss the tournament’s main event: the World Championship games. It’s sure to be a full house. wsop.com
Where to See Amazing Marine Species

1. Bali, Indonesia
   Want to look a 2,000-pound fish in the eye? Gargantuan Mola mola “sunfish”—the heaviest bony fish in the world—are fairly common in the waters surrounding this tropical paradise, where you’ll find vibrant reefs and abundant sea critters at popular dive and snorkel sites such as Menjangan Island and Tulamben.

2. Cozumel, Mexico
   A divers’ favorite, this Caribbean isle boasts the Palancar Reef—a coral wonderland teeming with turtles, eels and fish in a rainbow of colors. Snorkelers love the shallow reef at Punta Sur Eco Beach Park on the island’s southern tip.

3. Hawaii Island, Hawaii
   The state of Hawaii is rife with sea life, but only Hawaii Island offers the opportunity to dive and snorkel among giant manta rays. A surreal experience, nighttime boat tours use underwater lights to attract these exquisite creatures.

4. Galápagos Islands, Ecuador
   This chain of remote Eastern Pacific islands harbors perhaps the most eclectic collection of aquatic species on earth—from penguins to sharks to the world’s only swimming iguanas. Odds are good you’ll see them all, plus sea turtles and dolphins, at top snorkel spots like Isla Isabel and Isla Fernandina. Visit in style with Hilton Grand Vacation Club’s new cruise partner, CruisesOnly, which offers seven-night Galápagos cruises.

5. Maldives
   The crystal-clear Indian Ocean waters around this chain of atolls consisting of more than 1,000 islands are bursting with sea life. Beyond the white-sand beaches, on a snorkeling or dive boat tour of a marquee spot such as Ari Atoll, you are likely to spy sea turtles, dolphins, eels and rays among the countless tropical fish.

6. Crystal River National Wildlife Refuge, Florida
   November through March, hundreds of Florida manatees migrate to this Gulf Coast preserve, where you can swim with these massive yet graceful giants nicknamed “sea cows,” or stay dry and observe them from boardwalks at the Three Sisters Springs complex.

8. Alaska
   Otters, porpoises, seals and whales—humpbacks to belugas to killer orcas—call the icy waters of Alaska home. Whether you’re sipping Champagne on a luxury cruise ship or getting an up-close view of the creatures while on a small boat tour, you’ll be able to see them in spectacular settings like Kenai Fjords and Glacier Bay national parks.

9. Great Barrier Reef, Australia
   On the bucket list of every Finding Nemo fan, the planet’s largest coral reef system stretches some 1,400 miles along Australia’s Queensland coast. Do your dive mask and fins, then lay eyes on a mind-boggling number of marine species, including more than 1,600 types of fish and enough sharks, rays and dolphins to keep you Instagramming all the way home. Share your best photos with feedback@clubtraveler.com for a chance to be featured in Club Traveler. Help protect this beautiful part of the world by collecting information during your visit for the Eye on the Reef program.

10. New Zealand
    You needn’t freeze in Antarctica to see penguins in the wild when everyone’s favorite aquatic bird can also be spotted waddling along New Zealand’s South Island beaches. Penguin tour operators are based in Dunedin and Oamaru, the latter home to a colony of little blue penguins.

Club Members’ worlds recently became more flexible with the introduction of the new Hilton Honors Points & Money Rewards payment slider. The payment plan allows Members to use any combination of Points and money for accommodations. One way to take advantage of the slider: Hilton’s Conrad Maldives Rangali Island, which is home to Ithaa, the world’s only undersea restaurant. To enter the all-glass restaurant, travelers go through the world’s largest aquarium tunnel. Once seated, enjoy a meal in this magical spot and take in views of the Indian Ocean’s exotic marine life. Members can also convert ClubPoints to Hilton Honors Points for a stay at the resort.
Canada is looking pretty good for being 150 years old as of July 1, and the nation is celebrating its birthday in style by giving free admission to its 46 national parks (and historic sites and marine conservation areas) all year. Chief among those is the glacial jewel of Jasper National Park, a babe in the woods at 90. It has the vast beauty you’d expect from 4,200 square miles of Canadian Rockies, but what sets Jasper apart is its wildlife. Elk, moose and caribou; wolverines, coyotes and lynx; porcupines, marmots and pikas—all have a sanctuary in the protected wilderness.

The Dram Report
A peek inside Edinburgh

Where to Stroll
Get a sense for Old Town’s medieval feel as you roam its tight alleys and cobblestone streets. It’s here you’ll find The Royal Mile, which runs from Edinburgh Castle to the Palace of Holyroodhouse. New Town—the hub of the city’s business life—stands in contrast with a symmetrical layout and neoclassical architecture. Edinburgh offers many walking tours rich with history and entertainment. Whether it’s a stroll for foodies or a subterranean jaunt in the city’s haunted vaults, going on foot is a practical way to navigate the Scottish capital and learn its legends.

How to Get Around
Edinburgh has a robust bus system dominated by Lothian Buses (lothianbuses.co.uk). At all stops, there will be a sign indicating routes, making it easy to navigate. You can also use the Lothian app, which lets you locate nearby stops, check times and buy tickets. Lothian Day Tickets are valid on Lothian Buses and Edinburgh Trams; buy them on the first bus you use during the day. Bus tours start from Waverley Bridge in the city center next to the main railway station.

Where to Drink
Whisky is Scotland’s national drink, and the country has more than 100 distilleries where you can sample a wee dram. Next to the Edinburgh Castle, head into the Scotch Whisky Experience (scotchwhiskyexperience.co.uk), where you can learn how whisky is produced.
To toast Scotland’s other libations, make gin at the Edinburgh Gin Distillery (edinburghgindistillery.co.uk), or peruse the offerings at Innis & Gunn’s The Beer Kitchen (thebeerkitchen.co.uk), a brewery and pub with beer pairings. Be careful: You may end up gubbed, guttered or blootered (local lingo for levels of tipsiness).

Where to Eat
Farm to table—or, as they say in Edinburgh, nature to plate—is a trend in Scotland, too. For home-cooked dishes using seasonal produce, try The Kitchin (thekitchin.com) or the Scran & Scallie gastropub (scranandscallie.com), which features modern dishes alongside traditional fare (yes, they serve haggis). Timberyard has a garden that provides herbs and edible flowers for its own dishes. Artisan growers and foragers supply other local ingredients (timberyard.co).

Fun Fact
The magic of Edinburgh is truly the stuff of legend: J.K. Rowling penned the first book of the Harry Potter series here. If you’re smiling about Harry Potter and the Sorcerer’s Stone, you’re almost there. The British title, Harry Potter and the Philosopher’s Stone, was changed for the American release, as Americans aren’t familiar with the European tale of the “philosopher’s stone,” an alchemical substance that could help one achieve immortality. Potterheads should try The Potter Trail walking tour (pottertrail.com).

Where to Stay
Visitors have a number of boutique options. For the outdoor enthusiast, Hilton Grand Vacations Club at Dunkeld, in the heart of a 280-acre estate of forest and moors, is a two-hour ride from Edinburgh. The resort is along the River Tay, perfect for salmon fishing.

HOW TO GET THERE

Sparkling Pointe is a must for lovers of bubbly—all its offerings are effervescent.

Ask the Resort

New York City is splendid in the summertime—Shakespeare in the Park, rooftop dining, a whirl on Coney Island’s Cyclone roller coaster. It’s also hot. On those sticky-humid days, make like a New Yorker and get out of the city for a day or overnight trip. We asked Laurie Del Sole, general manager at West 57th Street by Hilton Club, for ways to escape for a spell.

“Everyone has heard of the Hamptons, and they really are a different experience of New York. Fire Island is two hours away from the city and is well-suited for boating—and for lounging on its pristine beaches. Seafood lovers should venture to Patchogue Bay to go oystering at Ketcham’s Seafarm (ketchamseafarm.com). Go farther north for dozens of world-class wineries. Start at Macari Vineyards in Mattituck (macariwines.com), listed as one of Food & Wine magazine’s favorite wineries to visit, then fuel up at the Village Cheese Shop (thevillagecheeseshop.com). Head east to Peconic to sample a flight at Raphael Wine (raphaelwine.com), known for its Mediterranean-style offerings, then finish up with bubbly at Sparkling Pointe Vineyard in Southold (sparklingpointe.com). Club Members who own at The Hilton Club–New York and other Hilton Club properties can enjoy unique benefits at all those establishments and more through Elevated Rewards.

“If a day trip is more your style, Palisades Interstate Park in New Jersey is half an hour away. It has 2,500 acres of river shorefront, 30 miles of hiking trails and a boat-launch ramp. It also has plenty of space for picnicking. Pick up sandwiches at Balducci’s beforehand (balduccis.com)—a branch of the legendary gourmet shop is just an eight-minute walk from the Club.”
On the Green

Get your swing on with the latest in travel-friendly golf tech

Maybe you’ve decided to test your mettle with irons. Or maybe it’s that your work has you seeing more green. Whatever your reason for getting into the game of golf, there’s no substitute for practice, and what better time to get some under your belt than vacation? But there is one detractor: inferior gear, because we all know subpar won’t get you under par. With this portable tech, a better swing is within grasp.

Ahead-of-the-curve vision

Add serious scope to your game with Bushnell’s compact, binocular-style laser yardage marker. It boasts 7x magnification and ranges up to 1,500 yards, and can even calculate slope angle. Waterproof and just 10 ounces, it requires no caddy—just a pocket (unless, of course, you take advantage of its built-in tripod mount). With this kind of spyware, victory, we promise, will be easier to see. bushnellgolf.com

Watch your swing

Sharpen your swing, sans lessons, with the Approach S6 watch from Garmin, which uses its SwingTempo and Tempo Training technology to bring you closer to the ideal upswing-downswing ratio. Behind its full-color display lies GPS-powered magic that instantly summons yardage and hole information on 40,000 golf courses. It’s true what they say: It really is all in the wrist. garmin.com

Grasp your numbers

Get intel on what your clubs just did with Arccos’ nifty digital sensors, which screw into the holes already in your handles and send real-time swing data to the Arccos app on your smartphone for on-the-fly adjustments (and to the cloud for long-term patterns). Its GPS can calculate distances for your next shot, and Tour Analytics can suss out a player’s handicap in driving, approach, chipping, sand game and putting. Your clubs have been waiting for this. arccosgolf.com

Rule of thumb

Compared with other sports, it’s safe to say that golf is tame. But what happens when, say, a sudden “gust of wind” sails your ball beyond the fence, or a dog on the lam turns your seventh-hole chip into a game of fetch? When things get hairy on the links, it’s crucial to have lesser-known rules at your fingertips. The Rules of Golf app by the United States Golf Association is a foolproof way to prepare for the unexpected—and it’s free. iTunes, Google Play

Get spiked

Renew the sole without getting a new one. Champ’s PiviX spikes are lightweight and lower to the ground, which will give you sharper traction on the green. They come in a bouquet of translucent shades, and the center of the spike turns solid when it’s ready to be replaced. Their universal design will fit any shoe, including Jordan Spieth’s, who’s already a fan. champspikes.com

Sport Totes

Any extreme-sports enthusiast knows well the pain of traveling with big gear. Fortunately for Club Members with Elite status, Luggage Forward spares the headaches with seamless delivery of your big, awkward (but important!) luggage. Here are three pieces of gear that make traveling-while-athlete even easier.

Burton Wheelie Gig Bag. As the name implies, two tiny but crucial wheels will indeed turn your snowboard schlep into a delightful wheelie gig (shown here). But should you face a stair, a removable shoulder strap makes for easy slinging. burton.com

Rhino Travel Bag. Pro-Lite’s surfboard bag makes the simple beautiful with its trim, lightweight design. A handy zipper, an external pocket and an air vent say one thing: It was made with actual humans in mind. prolite.com

ClubGlider Meridian. Named Editors’ Choice for Golf Travel Bag by Golf Digest, the bag by Sun Mountain is hard where it needs to be for maximum gear protection and soft where you want flexibility. And its two front legs on wheels will spare your back for the course. sunmountain.com

Simple smartphone cameras are here to stay—even if you have a DSLR by your side. Venture beyond the default camera phone settings to record more compelling, creative travel images with your device that's usually never more than an arm's length away.

HDR.
Turn on the high-dynamic range setting, usually found at the top of your screen when you reveal expanded menu options, in high-contrast situations to create an exposure that looks balanced. Try it out when capturing bright, snowy mountain scenes against a dark blue sky, or near reflective water.

Grid.
Go to the phone’s Settings menu, choose Photos & Camera and turn on the optional screen grid to assist with creating photos using the rule of thirds. Placing subjects near the grid’s intersecting lines creates visually pleasing compositions.

Panoramic capture.
Choose this setting to record wide vistas without the need for special lenses or software. Hold the shutter button and pan your smartphone’s camera horizontally while following the in-camera prompts, then release your finger to finish.

Burst mode.
If you want to take several photos in quick succession, press—don’t tap—the shutter button. Your smartphone’s camera will click several frames, making sure you don’t miss the moment.

Filter.
Get artsy and create pictures in a tone that mimics slide film or darkroom processing techniques. This feature is noted with three overlapping circles.

Flash.
The lightning bolt indicates that your camera has a built-in flash. Turn it off in museums, turn it on in dark restaurants, or choose the auto setting to allow the camera to decide when additional illumination is necessary.

Time-lapse.
When video-recording a slow process, such as a friend climbing a rocky cliff, choose the time-lapse feature. The final recording speeds up the frames, adding a comical twist to the memory.

Slow-mo.
If you want to slow down the frames of a fast video scene, like the annual running of the bulls in Spain or an auto race, use slow-mo. You can later review fine details that passed too quickly to fully absorb in real time.

Timer.
This setting triggers a delayed shutter, so you can prop up your smartphone (or use a tripod) and get into the scene for a wider view than a hand-held selfie. Look for a clock symbol.
Mealing and Dealing
Ways to save on food during your next trip

Vacation is often a time to splurge on delicious meals you wouldn’t necessarily shell out for at home. But indulging on dining doesn’t mean you have to bust your food budget. Here’s how to save by eating smart.

Go big for lunch. Whoever deemed that multiple-course meals were just for dinner was obviously not on vacation. One of the ultimate pleasures of a getaway is having a leisurely meal right smack in the middle of the day. Bonus: Prix-fixe lunch menus are generally less expensive than those for dinner, often for the same foods, and reservations are often easier to snag. With what you save by eating big during the day instead of the evening, you can even spring for an early afternoon cocktail without busting the budget.

Hit up happy hours. Many restaurants and bars offer happy hours that begin before the average worker leaves the office. So when on vacation, you can scope out these watering holes and begin imbibing and snacking well before 5 p.m. Ask your resort concierge for his or her favorite afternoon deals, and check the Hilton Grand Vacations mobile app’s community page to see where Members recommend eating in the area. Then hit up one or two spots in place of going out to a single restaurant for a sit-down dinner.

Always have a snack. For those who tend to get “hangry,” one rule to live by on vacation is to have a snack with you at all times. Pulling a granola bar or a piece of fruit out of your bag may prevent you from both annoying your travel companions and falling victim to purchasing overpriced nosh from the nearest vendor.

Avoid tourist traps. Depending on your vacation destination, there may be restaurants that are more geared toward travelers and less toward locals. While these establishments can be fun, chances are their prices will be substantially higher than those at a local pub or family-run joint. If you want to taste the true flavor of the region you’ve chosen to visit—and save a little dough while you’re at it—avoid the tourist traps. Ask your resort concierge where he or she would choose to go for a meal on a day off, and make a beeline in that direction. Alternatively, pick up cold cuts, cheeses, chips and salad ingredients and pack a picnic lunch before leaving your suite to visit a touristy part of town.
Local Perspective

Situated in north San Diego County between the city of San Diego and Orange County, Carlsbad sits on the Pacific coast and is known as the “Village by the Sea.” Club Members can stay at the Grand Pacific Palisades Resort on a lush ridge with incredible views. Experience your next trip like a local with these insider tips from longtime area resident Laura Dolata.

“Carlsbad is a great family destination with something for people of all ages. My favorite thing to do is walk with friends on the dedicated oceanfront walkway and have coffee, brunch or lunch nearby afterward. My favorite Mexican restaurant is Las Olas (lasolasmex.com). Dini’s (dinisbistro.com) is also popular with locals and tourists for happy hour, and both are great for watching the sunset. On the weekend you will see surfers, bicyclists, Rollerbladers and walkers all taking in the view. There are yoga classes and volleyball on the beach, and during the winter you may spot dolphins offshore. Nearby, families with young children can take in Legoland. There is so much to love about Carlsbad.”
Sampling flavors and dishes that reflect destinations’ locales is part of the overall vacation experience. The same can be said for libations, especially in light of talented mixologists who use regional flavors when creating their cocktails. Take a spring (or summer) break in any of these cities, and you’ll discover refreshing concoctions that deliciously complement their home base.

Honolulu

If you conjure up images of tropical cocktails when thinking about Hawaii, your imagination is spot-on. Victor Bergeron, founder of Trader Vic’s, is said to have served the first mai tai on Waikiki Beach in 1953 when he introduced his recipe, which included pineapple juice, to the bartenders at the Royal Hawaiian. Now you can enjoy this fruity drink throughout the island, from the Royal Hawaiian’s Mai Tai Bar to the Hokulani Waikiki’s rooftop Nā Lani bar. Earlier this year, Stripsteak (michaelmina.net) debuted a colorful cocktail menu combining premium spirits and local ingredients. Sips to try include local favorite Shaka Sour 2.0, which blends St. George Terroir Gin, Chartreuse, shiso, lime and egg whites, or Sun’s Out Rum’s Out, a fun yellow cocktail with Caliche Rum, orange Curacao, pineapple and mango, topped off with coconut foam. Okole maluna!

Miami

As expected, the Miami cocktail scene’s shakers are overflowing on South Beach and beyond. Slip away from the beach and over to Wynwood to find Beaker & Gray (beakerandgray.com), where Ben Potts has concocted a three-part cocktail menu: Shaken, Stirred and Strange. From Shaken, try the Re-Pete, with Avuá Amburana Cachaca, Campari, pineapple and cinnamon. To the south, take in the skyline views of downtown Miami from rooftop lounge Pawn Broker (pawnbrokermiami.com). If you’re with a small group of friends, order the George A. Romero, served in a pineapple and big enough to share: Old Forester Templeton rye, passion fruit, pineapple, barbecue syrup, Angostura, grapefruit bitters and lemon. ¡Salud!

Park City

When a day on the slopes or adventuring around Park City calls for a toast, you’re in luck—this Utah mountain town has plenty to pour. The cocktail menu at Edge Steakhouse (westgatedestinations.com) gives the steaks a run for their money, which is saying a lot—Edge won Best Steakhouse in Utah in the 2016 Best of State Awards. For local flavor, try 7000 Blackberries, which features locally distilled High West 7000’ Vodka, Chambord, muddled blackberries and Prosecco for a bit of bubbly at the end, like that champagne powder on the mountain. On Park City’s Main Street, the mixologists at The Nickel Bar at Firewood (firewoodonmain.com) offer up the Wasatch Garden, a delicious blend of Hendrick’s Gin, muddled English cucumber, mint, fresh lime and local honey. Cheers!
Hands-on Fun
Dive in and get dirty!

Vacations are all about leaving the routine of the day-to-day at home and trying something new. When you can cut loose and get down and dirty while learning about your destination, joy is sure to follow. Consider these fab, family-friendly programs for hands-on fun—and leave the cleanup for later.

Pan for Gold in New Zealand
All that glitters could very well be gold in Arrowtown, a historic gold mining town 20 minutes from Queenstown on New Zealand’s South Island. Several places in town rent gold pans to visitors looking to get lucky. Walk a few minutes from town to the banks of the Arrow River, where you can tip your pans into the icy water and scout for shimmering flecks amid the black sand. Even during summer (December–February), the kids’ hands are sure to be feeling frosty by the time you’re done panning. Make time to warm up with a mug of hot chocolate (and a piece of cake?) at one of the cute cafés in town after your outing. arrowtown.com

Play Farmer in Hawaii
Treat the family to a tasty lesson on Hawaii’s farm-to-table ethos during tours at Kahumana. Situated in the lush hinterlands of west Oahu, this organic farm is where some of the scrumptious ingredients served at top island restaurants are grown. Pack sunblock and clothes you don’t mind dirtying up for a firsthand look at sustainable chicken farming and the cultivation of the farm’s produce, with an introduction to aquaponics and permaculture in the mix, too. After the tour, settle in with your budding farmers under the shade of a mango tree at the on-site cafe for a farm-fresh meal served in the true spirit of Aloha. Almost everything on the menu has been grown on-site, and you can taste the difference. kahumana.org

Dig for Fossils in Utah
Open every day except Sundays from April through October, the U-Dig Fossils quarry in Delta, Utah (a 2.5-hour drive from Park City), is a thrilling spot for kids to forage for trilobites—marine fossils of animals that became extinct more than 250 million years ago. The hourly fee to dig includes tools, and staff members are on hand to offer advice on the best places to search within the piles of shale. Your kids are sure to look akin to coal miners after breaking apart all that rock in search of treasures. And, of course, finders are keepers here—so whatever they uncover is theirs to take home. u-digfossils.com

Tips for Getting Them Clean Again
1. In addition to a change of clothes, invest in an Itzy Ritzy Travel Happens Wet Storage Bag (itzyrity.com) to stow dirty gear until you can wash it.
2. Pack travel stain removers such as Tide to Go sticks and Shout Wipes.
3. Good news: Most Hilton Grand Vacations resorts have an on-site laundry facility. But for small jobs, the Scrubba Wash Bag (below, thescrubba.com) is a cool portable washing machine modeled on old-fashioned scrubbing boards—perfect for when you have to clean it now.
3 Days in...
Texas Hill Country

Boasting charming small towns, rolling green hills, backyard barbecues, wineries, swimming holes and hiking trails, the Texas Hill Country offers an abundance of ways to spend your days. Whether you prefer an adventurous or relaxing getaway, this 14,000-square-mile region of central Texas—loosely defined as west of Austin and north of San Antonio—offers both.
Day One
Seventy-eight miles west of Austin, the historic town of Fredericksburg is rich with German heritage and filled with small-town appeal, making it one of the most-visited towns in Texas Hill Country. Main Street is lined with museums, shops and restaurants, featuring German cuisine like spaetzle and bratwursts. While exploring, sample a flight of craft beer and a soft pretzel at Fredericksburg Brewing Company (yourbrewery.com) before turning in for dinner. For dining, Der Lindenbaum (derlindenbaum.com) is a local staple, serving classic dishes in a European-influenced stone building, a style found throughout the town. End your evening by following the sounds of live music into one of the many beer gardens.

Day Two
With Fredericksburg as your origin, you’re in the midst of the Texas Wine Trail, showcasing award-winning wines and picturesque vineyards. On the trail, discover bluebonnets in full bloom during spring, and fresh peaches and lavender in early summer. Enjoy a cheese plate and wine under the shade of live oaks on the lawn of William Chris Vineyards in nearby Hye (williamchriswines.com). If you prefer whiskey, schedule a tour of Garrison Brothers—the state’s “first legal whiskey distillery,” tucked away on a ranch (garrisonbros.com). In Albert, 20 miles east of Fredericksburg, you will find an authentic, historic dance hall with its original wood floor waiting for your moves. As you work your way back to Fredericksburg, have a sandwich at Hye Market, a former post office converted into a deli and tasting room (hyemarket.com).

Day Three
Leave a day to explore the great outdoors and head to one of the region’s emblematic landmarks—Enchanted Rock. The largest pink granite dome in the U.S., at an elevation of more than 1,800 feet, is 20 minutes from Fredericksburg. Hike to the top for views of the surrounding valleys and glistening salmon earth below. Afterward, reward yourself with a scenic drive along Willow City Loop—16 miles through canyons and ranch land and along country creeks. Wind up and down switchbacks as the loop’s route exposes you to a topography unique to the Hill Country. It’s especially popular in spring when it’s lined with bluebonnets and Indian paintbrushes. Stop by Harry’s on the Loop right in Willow City—an old house turned barbecue joint featuring hammocks in the trees, a fine jukebox and an antique piano.

Where to Stay
Rest your heads in the heart of Texas Hill Country at Hampton Inn & Suites Fredericksburg, which is within walking distance of the town’s main attractions.
Taste of Mexico

Boasting distinct regional flavors across its 31 states and capital city, Mexico is a food lover’s ultimate getaway. The country’s traditional cuisine, which was awarded Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity status by UNESCO in 2010, entices travelers to taste as they tour. Savor your vacation days with this insider’s guide and get ready to explore Mexico’s culinary scene.

A typical dish you might find on the coasts: grilled scallops and clams with butter, chiles and coriander.
A taste the complex, alluring combination of spices and local herbs, including epazote and hoja santa, in Oaxaca. Treat your taste buds in Guadalajara to birria, the spicy slow-cooked stew of goat, lamb or pork. Then there's fresh-from-the-sea octopus, clams and shrimp served in Baja California's resort destination, Los Cabos. On the country's eastern coast, Mayan-informed recipes like clams and shrimp served in Baja California's resort destination, Los Cabos. On the country's eastern coast, Mayan-informed recipes like clams served in Baja California's resort destination, Los Cabos. On the country's eastern coast, Mayan-inspired dishes originated in this area. Guadalajara is now a go-to travel destination, especially for travelers with an appetite. Two of the capital's restaurants, Pujol and Quintonil, appear on the 2016 edition of Restaurant magazine's World's 50 Best Restaurants list, and their exquisite tasting menus are exceptionally priced. Even if you can't secure a reservation at one of these coveted tables, you won't be disappointed. The city abounds with excellent restaurants, including Anzul Histórico, on the ground floor of a 17th century mansion. The menu changes monthly, with the flip of each calendar page bringing a deep exploration of a specific region's traditional recipes. Other standouts include Italian-influenced Rosetta, seafood-centric Contramar and French-Mexican eatery Máximo Bistrot Local. Can't choose? Try a tour with Eat Mexico or Mexican Food Tours; guides will take you on a food adventure, where you can sample specialties of several restaurants and learn about attractions along the way.

1. Oaxaca
    Childish ruse: restaurant and corn are central to Oaxacan cuisine. Bite into tortillas piled high with toppings, including ingredients you might consider exotic, such as chapulines, aka toasted grasshoppers, which—if you're curious—are delicious, airy and light, a bit like popcorn. For upscale dining, make a reservation at Atznique, where Oaxacan-born chef José Manuel Badíos Rodríguez shows off the skills he learned while working at famed Spanish restaurants such as Azteca and the now-shuttered El Bulli. Badíos takes classic Oaxacan recipes and makes them brand new through clever, creative techniques and impressive plating. Visitors should also try the local libation, mezcal. Tequila's smoky cousin, mezcal is best sampled at Mezcaloteca, which has more than 80 varieties, many of them unique, artisanal, single-batch bottlings.

2. Los Cabos & Baja California
    Throughout the centuries, farming has been a way of life in Mexico, but in Baja California, the just-picked harvest makes its way to tables at a number of local restaurants. Acro Baja, Flora's Field Kitchen and Huerta Los Tamarindos are the hottest tables around, so make reservations. All three have open-air tables that look directly onto their own farms. For a more casual taste of the region, stop by El Mercado, a food hall that opened in 2016 and features more than a dozen stalls specializing in everything from seafood tacos to barbecue. If your travels take you north of Los Cabos, don't miss Deckman’s en el Mujor restaurant, nestled into one of the Valle de Guadalupe vineyards.

3. Guadalajara
    Guadalajara is the birthplace of the playful jarabe tapatio—aka the Mexican hat dance—Guadalajara also holds its own at the table. In fact, some of Mexico's iconic dishes originated in this area. Chief among them: the spicy, meat-based stew called birria and the drunken sandwich. While these are casual foods, Guadalajara also has world-class restaurants, including the wildly popular Lala Bistro, where tasting menus range from six to 16 courses. You'll be forgiven if you insist on photographing every one of them. Many visitors to Guadalajara also make a side trip to the town of Tequila to visit agave farms and learn how Mexico's favorite spirit is made.

4. Mexico City
    Thanks to environmental and social reforms and an increasingly visible international profile, Mexico City is now a go-to travel destination, especially for travelers with an appetite. Two of the capital's restaurants, Pujol and Quintonil, appear on the 2016 edition of Restaurant magazine's World's 50 Best Restaurants list, and their exquisite tasting menus are exceptionally priced. 5. Mérida, the Yucatán Peninsula & the Riviera Maya
    Once Mexico's wealthiest city, rich by the barons who once cultivated on the peninsula. Thanks to environmental and social reforms and an increasingly visible international profile, Mérida is a culinary destination, especially for travelers with an appetite. Two of the capital's restaurants, Pujol and Quintonil, appear on the 2016 edition of Restaurant magazine's World's 50 Best Restaurants list, and their exquisite tasting menus are exceptionally priced. WHERE TO STAY
Thanks to Club affiliate Fiesta Americana, Members can reserve vacations at an additional three resorts* in Mexico.

Club Members can stay at any of Grand Fiesta Americana Los Cabos All Inclusive Golf & Spa
Twelve restaurants and bars keep guests sated, and the on-site SOMMA Wine Spa, one of only seven such spas in the world (and the only one in Mexico), draws inspiration from Baja California’s wine-producing Valle de Guadalupe for its exclusive, luxurious treatments.

LAT20 by Live Aqua
This boutique, adults-only, all-inclusive resort is close to all the action of Playa del Carmen, but it may be hard to leave the property since there are so many on-site dining and recreational options, including the rooftop infinity pool. Be sure to book a table at Chef’s Kitchen for a locally sourced menu and a view of the Caribbean and the island of Cozumel.

Grand Fiesta Americana Puerto Vallarta
Foodies won’t be disappointed at this beachfront, all-inclusive, adults-only resort. Dinner spot Rojo Corazón interprets Mexican favorites with contemporary notes, and La Cevicheria will satisfy anyone with a seafood craving. Don’t skip Tequila Lounge, where you can try a variety of Mexico’s favorite libation.

*A daily all-inclusive fee of $80 per person is required for all three resorts. To learn more or book your reservation, go online or call a Club Counselor.

A FESTIVAL FOR EVERY SEASON

Spring
The country’s capital, Mexico City, has a seemingly endless number of festivals, but a long-standing favorite is the Festival del Centro Histórico, an international arts and culture extravaganza spanning two weeks in late March and early April in the revitalized Historic Center neighborhood. The full calendar of music, art and theater also includes special events and meals hosted by the Historic Center’s restaurants and cultural museum.

Summer
Guadalajara, the birthplace of mariachi music and charreada (horsemanship), hosts an annual summer celebration of both during the International Mariachi and Charro Festival. Think you’re not interested in these traditions? Think again! The colorful and lively displays of musical and athletic prowess will be sure to entice. Don’t forget to indulge in Guadalajara’s cuisine, including its iconic torta ahogadas, or “drowned” sandwiches.

Fall
2018 marks the 45th annual Festival Internacional Cervantino (International Cervantes Festival), held in Guadalajara. Don’t be fooled by the name: While 16th century Spanish writer Miguel Cervantes inspired the festival that’s named for him, the lineup is a who’s who of international dance, musica and theatrical talent. Past performers have included musicians ranging from American icon B.B. King to Latin music great Rubén Blades.

Winter
Oaxaca’s Guelagüetza (a celebration of indigenous cultures held the last two Mondays of July) and Day of the Dead are perhaps the city’s best-known festivals, but the curious and endearing La Noche de los Rábanos is also worth traveling for. Held annually on December 23, the festival features artisans who turn a most unlikely object, the humble radish, into an astonishing array of hand-carved and constructed figures and scenes displayed in the main square. The origins of the festival date to 1897, when a contest was held that intended to promote local agriculture.

Club Rec
Club Member Karley Schreiner-Chubb says experiencing a cenote in Mexico is a must. Take a dip in one of these freshwater holes (pictured), which are sometimes in caves, for an “experience like no other,” she says. “The fresh water is crystal clear and refreshing in the summer at about 70 degrees.”
Ask a Club Counselor

In each issue of Club Traveler, a Club Counselor will answer questions about how the Club works. Club Member Deb Novotny asked:

Can you explain the Cancellation Protection that can be purchased?
Cancellation Protection gives you peace of mind in case of unforeseen events. Should you need to cancel your vacation plans at any time prior to check-in at the resort, your Points will be returned to your account with their normal expiration date. Unlike travel insurance, you are not required to provide documentation should you need to cancel your reservation. Cancellation Protection is offered for Home Week, Home Resort, Hilton Club Priority, Club and RCI exchange reservations using ClubPoints at the time the reservation is confirmed (up to one day prior to arrival).* For more information, visit the help section of the Club website, where you’ll find useful videos explaining Cancellation Protection and other Club topics.

Make the Most of Your Membership

News, tips and tricks from your Club

From Club technology advancements to the grand opening of The Grand Islander by Hilton Grand Vacations Club to Team Member tips, we’ve got ways to help you make the most of your membership.

Improved Online Booking Engine
Thanks to a new booking engine, which rolled out in spring, Members can now search across multiple properties in a location and across multiple unit types without having to refer to individual resort pages. Members can easily shift their travel dates to find what works.
For example, search for “Orlando,” and all four Hilton Grand Vacations Club properties will appear in one view you can scroll through. The new, user-friendly search, which many Members had been asking for, is similar to the former Revolution booking engine. Members can also now book Club affiliates like Fiesta Americana and Anantara online, with more booking options in development.

Member Dashboard Improvements
From your Member dashboard on the Club website, you can now directly manage and book Home Week reservations, access your Hilton Honors points balance and account information, and directly link to your HGV/RCI account.

New Intelligent Call Routing
With the Club’s new Intelligent Call Routing, when you call a Club Counselor, the system matches the number you are calling from to your phone number on file to route you to the Club Counselor best able to meet your specific needs. (So make sure your profile on the Club website is updated with any phone number you might use to contact the Club.) Plus, if there is a wait time, you can use the new call-back feature to hold your place in queue, and a Club Counselor will call you as soon as he or she is available.

Grand Islander Opening
Soaring above Waikiki’s white-sand beaches, The Grand Islander by Hilton Grand Vacations Club celebrated its grand opening in Honolulu in March. It boasts local influences in the interior decorating, such as art and photography from area artists and bold furnishings that pair crisp materials with rustic textures. The 37-story property is the newest addition to the 22-acre Hilton Hawaiian Village Waikiki Beach Resort. Stay in exquisite one-, two- and three-bedroom suites or luxurious two- and three-bedroom penthouses with amenities like fully equipped kitchens, private balconies, and washers and dryers. Love to swim? If you’re staying at The Grand Islander, take a dip in the resort’s exclusive pool or one of four additional swimming pools on the property, including a 10,000-square-foot superpool, beach and saltwater lagoon.

Once you've pulled up to Kings' Land by Hilton Grand Vacations Club, you might have the luck to meet Ernella Matsuda. A service agent at the front desk, she's the point of entry for Members arriving at the Waikoloa Beach resort on Hawaii Island. The essence of her work is talking with Members—“I just like people,” she reports—to help them enjoy their vacations as much as possible. Club Traveler chatted with Ernella about her job at Kings’ Land.

What drew you to Kings’ Land?
It's neat to see people living out their travel dreams. Sometimes you'll see a guest arrive at night when it's dark, so Hawaii isn't really what they've pictured—and then you see them the next morning after they've rested. They've woken up in the sun, in this beautiful place, and that's when they know they're on vacation. To see the change in people just from night to day is such an experience. It's just where I'm supposed to be.

Can you tell us about some of your most memorable guests?
There are so many. We had one Member stay for a month. We saw her every morning, every afternoon, exercising, taking the shuttle, and we'd help her in any way we could. At the end of her stay she came to me and said, “Because you helped me,” and handed me tea from China, where she was from. We also have people who come here to recover. When you've been through an illness, you need to relax. Having the opportunity to help people through that time is really special.

What sets Kings’ Land apart?
We're very family-oriented. That really begins with the people who work here. People can bring their kids to plenty of places, but since we treat each other like family, that feeling transfers to the guests—and that's how it should work. If you're a smiling, happy person, people reflect that back to you and wind up having a better vacation.

Where do you send hungry Members?
Sansei's is wonderful. It's a Japanese steakhouse, but it has all sorts of food, so it's good for different kinds of diners. If people just want to relax, Daylight Mind café is a good place to hang out. But on my night off, I just might be at Roy's for the chocolate soufflé.

What's your favorite recommendation for an off-the-beaten-path activity?
It's literally walking a path—the shoreline. You find beautiful shells, beautiful glass that's been softened by the ocean. When I was a child you could walk the shoreline and find whole glass floats that Japanese fishing boats used to keep fishing nets afloat. You don't see those much anymore, but you can still find the weathered glass. I love to walk and look for shells. If I get a nice shell, I might put it in my hand and say a quiet prayer for somebody, or just think good thoughts. It's relaxing.
Intrepid travelers know that one of the best ways to explore a new setting is by hitting the trails. From New England to the American Southwest to far-flung destinations such as New Zealand and the Indian subcontinent, make the most of these popular paths in four exciting locales.

Walk on the Wild Side

Use RCI affiliated resorts as a base for these splendid day hikes.

JIM CORBETT NATIONAL PARK, INDIA

A journey through Jim Corbett National Park in northern India, shown above, will conjure images of Kipling’s The Jungle Book and you may even spot one of the subcontinent’s most treasured animals, the royal Bengal tiger. The park is also home to more than 550 species of birds, 488 types of plants, and 37 varieties of dragonflies, many of which you can discover on foot.

A favorite day hike is to Corbett Falls near the town of Kaladhungi. A mile-long loop path leads you through a teak forest to a peaceful waterfall with views of Indian pond heron and enchanting butterflies. Further exploration into the park’s wilderness is best viewed by safari.

Birdwatchers should keep an eye out for the black-chinned hummingbird, the rosy minivet and the majestic gray-headed fishing eagle. Don’t forget your binoculars!

SEDONA, ARIZONA

In the heart of the American Southwest, Sedona is famous for its otherworldly red-rock mountains, pine forests and New Age enthusiasts, making it a perfect spot for a soul-renewing hike. Try the Soldier Pass, pictured here. A mile-long loop trail leads to the top of Brins Mesa for 360-degree views of Secret Canyon Wilderness and Wilson Mountain, the area’s highest peak. A kilometer access to the rockshelter known as Devil’s Kitchen and the Seven Sacred Pools, an ancient water source of the Sinagua Indians. Soldier Pass is named for the U.S. Cavalry troops who followed this route in 1871. As you retrace their steps, keep an eye out for carved rock arches, cypress and juniper trees, and javelina, which resemble wild boar.

Before your hike, fuel up in town at Indian Gardens Oak Creek Market (indiangardens.com), a grocery and café known for its rustic atmosphere, local goods and Southwest-themed dishes.
Club Members can use Points to stay at RCI® affiliated resorts in stunning natural settings across the globe*. To find resorts in hiking-friendly destinations, log in to your Club account at club.hiltongrandvacations.com and navigate to the RCI® Exchange site. Best of Both Worlds
Members share their favorite vacation memories

My husband retired from his work as a police officer two years ago, and we wanted to get the whole family together to mark that. We all love the beach, and we’d never been to Myrtle Beach, so we knew Ocean 22 would work out. It was exactly what we had in mind when we became Club Members. When we traveled with our kids when they were younger we could just pile everyone into a room, but now that our kids have kids we all need our space. It was wonderfully spacious, with room for privacy and for us to all hang out, too.

Every family picked a day that was theirs to plan. One of my daughters picked a day trip to Fort Sumter as her day; that’s where the Civil War officially began. My other daughter did a boardwalk day—it was within walking distance and it had a Ferris wheel and restaurants. We really fell for an area called Broadway at the Beach, which wasn’t a far drive and had an aquarium, kids’ entertainment and some fantastic restaurants.

For my husband’s and my day, we walked to Bagel Factory to get breakfast for everyone. That night we went to Bummz Beach Cafe next door to Ocean 22. And in between: beach day! That’s really what we were there for, and Ocean 22 was perfect because it was right on the beach. We actually began most of our days at the pool. They had an outdoor pool plus a covered one, so it didn’t matter if it was rainy. You could order food there, so we’d have snacks at the pool and then head to the beach, or go back and forth between the two.

That “best of both worlds” feeling was what made our trip so stress-free. There was enough nearby that everyone could do their own thing when they wanted—my sons-in-law might go golfing in the morning, or we’d go shopping—and then we’d regroup, so everybody had their own vacation plus the group vacation, too.

I’m returning to the area later this year, and to be honest I’m not sure who’s coming with me! It might be a family trip if people can get off work, or it might just be a couples’ trip, or maybe a girlfriends’ getaway. Whatever the case, I can’t wait to go back.
